

mini jewelry roll

A small fabric travel carrying case for jewelry, with two pockets, a strap with a snap for rings, and five slots for necklaces, that folds up and closes with ribbon ties.

suggested fabrics

Light weight woven fabric. Avoid fabrics that are heavyweight, sheer, stretchy, drapey, or with pile.

finished dimensions

14.25" tall and 5" wide open; 4" tall folded.

preparation & construction notes

- Set scaling to "none", or "print actual size" in properties when printing this pattern.
- Measure the 1" x 1" test square before you cut the pattern to make sure it has printed correctly.
- Cut out patterns along solid black lines. If necessary, tape pattern pieces together at dashed lines, matching pattern name and letters/numbers.
- "Self" fabric refers to the main fabric or outside fabric of your project.
- Yardage listed in "materials needed" assumes fabric at least 44" wide. You will need extra yardage to match stripes, plaids, or large motifs.
- Press the self, lining, and accent fabrics to remove any wrinkles, before laying out the pattern to cut or to apply interfacing.
- Use a lightweight, woven fusible interfacing like Pellon Shape-Flex (SF101).
- Make sure the grainline arrow on the pattern is parallel with the selvedge when laying out the pattern on fabric.
- The dotted lines on the pattern mark the center and true bias. Use them to align with motifs on printed fabrics.
- Patterns that must be cut on the fold are clearly marked. Align the straight edge of the pattern with the folded edge of the fabric. The fold is also the center of the pattern.
- There are three great ways to accurately cut fabric: (1) pin patterns to fabric and cut out with scissors (2) use pattern weights and a rotary cutter with a cutting mat (3) use pattern weights and trace patterns with tailor's chalk, then cut out with scissors. Use the method that you are most comfortable with to get the best results.
- Transfer all notches ➤ from the patterns to your fabric with tailor's chalk, or with tiny snips in the fabric. Make sure your marks or snips stay inside the seam allowance.
- All seam allowances are included in each pattern piece, and are noted in each step.
